

Jeong Won-seop Acquitted 35 Years After Murder Conviction

Jeong Won-seop managed a comic book store in 1972 when a 9-year-old girl disappeared after leaving her home to walk to the store. An intensive search was undertaken because the girl's father was chief of the local police station in Chuncheon, South Korea. Her body was found in a nearby farm field, and it was determined she had been raped and strangled.

Jeong was a suspect because his store was the girl's destination. Jeong confessed during his intense interrogation, but after it ended he recanted. He protested he was innocent and only confessed to stop being tortured. Charged with the girl's rape and murder, Jeong's defense during his 1973 trial was his confession was coerced and the police had fabricated evidence. Convicted on the basis of his confession, Jeong was sentenced to life in prison. His appeal was denied by South Korea's Supreme Court, and he served almost 15 years in prison before being paroled in December 1987.

After his release Jeong became a Christian minister. In November 1999 he petitioned the Seoul High Court for a retrial based on the public disclosure that the police routinely tortured suspects in the early 1970s. That information supported his three-decade long contention that he was coerced to falsely confess. His petition was denied in October 2001.

South Korea's Truth and Reconciliation Committee (TRC) was established in December 2005 to investigate historical incidents in Korean history, including human rights abuses during previous political regimes. Jeong petitioned the TRC to consider his case. Only able to recommend that Jeong merited a retrial, in December 2007 the TRC forwarded Jeong's case to the Chuncheon District Court for review based on the police interrogator's violation of his human rights.

Jeong Won-seop raises his arms in victory after his acquittal on November 28, 2008

Jeong was granted a retrial, and the judge ruled his confession couldn't be introduced as evidence because of the threats and torture used by the police during his interrogation. Jeong was acquitted on November 28, 2008. Although Jeong's marriage dissolved during his imprisonment, his former wife and his son were present in the courtroom when his acquittal was announced.

Afterwards Jeong told reporters, "It is not only a victory for me, but also a victory for Korean democracy." Jeong also spoke about his torturers, "Those officers were promoted and rewarded despite their wrongdoing, but heaven will serve them justice. But now I want to forgive them." When asked, Jeong said, "I will file a lawsuit to get compensation from the state."

Sources:

35-year-old murder conviction tossed, Joong Ang Daily (Seoul), November 29, 2008.
Man Cleared of Murder Charge After 36 Years, The Korea Times, November 29, 2008.

Teddy Thompson Awarded $272,000 For Seven Years Wrongful Imprisonment

Sixteen year-old Teddy Pierries Thompson was arrested on May 8, 2000 as one of two robbers who committed a Hampton Roads, Virginia armed robbery. Thompson was identified by one of the two victims who stated he was "100 per cent sure" he participated in the March 26 robbery. During his trial in 2001 the jury disregarded the other victim's statement that Thompson wasn't the robber, and that Thompson produced a receipt for his rental of a Virginia Beach recording studio the night of the robbery. Protesting his innocence, Thompson was sentenced to 16 years in prison.

Thompson lost his appeals, and he was faced with completing his entire sentence when the unexpected happened. Antonio Mitchell, the witness who identified Thompson, contacted law enforcement officials on July 30, 2007 and told them he identified the wrong person. Mitchell told them that another man had admitted to him that he committed the robbery, and offered to return the stolen money. After an investigation the Hampton Commonwealth's Attorney determined that Mitchell's recantation was credible, and that without it there was no evidence supporting Thompson's conviction. He then submitted a motion to vacate Thompson's conviction, which was granted on September 10, 2007. Thompson was released later that day after seven years and four months of incarceration.

Thompson was thrilled to get out and spend time with his two 7-year-old daughters. He said, "I was in jail all their life. I'm just taking my time right now to get to know my kids." He also said that prison is "no place for nobody. You're talked to like an animal or a child. Every day, all day."

Virginia doesn't have a wrongful conviction compensation law, so a special legislative bill is required for a payment from the state. On January 13, 2009 state Representative Tom Gear from Hampton Roads submitted a bill providing for the payment to Thompson of more than $50,000 in a lump sum, plus a $207,000 annuity to be paid monthly for 25 years. The bill also provides a transition assistance grant of $15,000 and tuition reimbursement up to $10,000 for career and technical training. On February 24, 2009 the House and Senate both passed the compensation bill. The payments to Thompson will begin after Gov. Timothy Kaine signs the bill.

Sources: Rediscovering Freedom, Daily Press (Newport News, VA), September 12, 2007.
HB2050, 2008 Virginia Legislature.

Romeo Phillion's Murder Conviction Tossed After 31 Years Imprisonment

Romeo Phillion was convicted in 1972 for the 1967 murder of a Canadian fireman in Ottawa, Ontario. When questioned after the crime Phillion told police that on the day of the murder he was 180 miles away in Trenton having his broken down car repaired.

Four years later Phillion confessed to the murder while being questioned about a robbery. He immediately retracted the confession, and there was no physical, forensic or eyewitness evidence tying him to the murder. So in convicting him, the jury relied on his confession and four prosecution witnesses who testified they saw him in Ottawa on the day of the murder — but none saw him commit the crime. Phillion was sentenced to life in prison.

Romeo Phillion during Nov. 2008 hearing

In 1998 Phillion received a manila envelope from an anonymous sender. The envelope contained evidence the prosecution did not provide to his trial lawyer. The most important document was a police report written on April 12, 1968 that cleared Phillion of the murder. The report was written by Ottawa police investigator David McCombie, and it confirmed Phillion's alibi of being in Trenton at the time of the crime. Police investigators interviewed workers at the gas station where Phillion's car was repaired, who confirmed his alibi. Romeo also traded his car's radio for gas when he left the station. McCombie's report stated that because Romeo's presence in Trenton had been confirmed, "We do not believe that

Phillion cont. on p. 11